About the Magazine

Hooked up in 1868, the Canadian Pharmacists magazine (CPJ) is the oldest continuously published periodical in Canada. Our venture is to guide pharmacists in optimizing patient care by linking information to exercise. Our vision is to become a leading magazine for the software of studies and understanding into pharmacy practice, facilitating exercise alternate in the direction of affected person-targeted care.

CPJ is published 6 instances in line with 12 months, with occasional supplements on specific medical topics. This peer-reviewed magazine publishes unique research, reviews, commentaries, evidence briefs, medical practice hints and practice tools relating to advancing pharmacy exercise closer to patient-focused care and improving outcomes. Opinion portions and outlines of progressive exercise models are also welcome.

CPJ is the reputable book of the Canadian Pharmacists affiliation. CPhA supports pharmacists as leading health experts of their efforts to improve the profession of pharmacy, optimize remedy use and enhance fitness outcomes for his or her patients.
