About the Magazine

Forum Italicum is a peer-reviewed international journal of Italian studies primarily based at Stony Brook university, new york, united states, and based via M. Ricciardelli in 1967. The journal is intended as a assembly-area in which scholars, critics, and teachers can gift their views at the literature, language, and subculture of Italy and different nations with regards to Italy. Young and hitherto unpublished students are advocated to make contributions their essential works. ANVUR (Agenzia Nazionale di Valutazione del Sistema Universitario e della Ricerca) has now awarded discussion board Italicum its maximum feasible ranking, Classe A, within the area of Italian Literature, crucial idea and Comparative Literature.
