About the Magazine

The Journal of Humanistic Psychology (JHP) is an interdisciplinary discussion for commitments, contentions and assorted proclamations relating to humanistic brain research. It tends to self-improvement, relational experiences, social issues and philosophical issues. A worldwide diary of human potential, self-completion, the quest for importance and social change, JHP was established by Abraham Maslow and Anthony Sutich in 1961. This diary is an individual from the Committee on Publication Ethics (COPE).
