About the Magazine

Journal of Network and Information Security is a peer reviewed Journal focusing on paradigms such as computer networks, network architecture and design, wireless adhoc and sensor networks, multimedia networking, information systems, routing and traffic engineering(although not limited to these niche segments). It publishes original research articles, case studies, review articles, technical notes, book reviews etc. relating to all aspects of software engineering. These areas may pertain to not just theoretical (basic) research, but also applied research.
