About the Magazine

The Economic and Political Weekly, distributed from Mumbai, is an Indian establishment which appreciates a worldwide notoriety for greatness in autonomous grant and basic request.

First distributed in 1949 as the Economic Weekly and since 1966 as the Economic and Political Weekly, EPW, as the diary is prevalently known, involves an exceptional spot in the scholarly history of free India. For over five decades EPW has stayed a one of a kind gathering that without fail has united scholastics, scientists, strategy creators, autonomous masterminds, individuals from non-administrative associations and political activists for discusses riding financial matters, governmental issues, human science, culture, the earth and various different controls.

EPW is likewise extraordinary on the grounds that it is the one discussion where there is a trade of thoughts over the sociology disciplines - political researchers banter with business analysts, sociologists read what political specialists need to state, history specialists study what financial specialists need to state, etc.

EPW, distributed by the Sameeksha Trust, an enrolled magnanimous trust, is the main sociology diary of its sort on the planet. Where other rumored diaries distribute either just remarks on contemporary issues or examination papers, EPW is exceptional in that consistently it distributes investigation of contemporary issues next to each other with scholastic papers in the sociologies. The main other comparative distribution which contains short remarks and examination yield is Nature of the U.K., which covers the physical sciences.

EPW has been worked throughout the decades with a careful spending plan and has encountered extensive budgetary troubles. It has become what it is today a direct result of the enthusiasm and benevolent endeavors of its staff, support from its givers and generosity from sponsors.
